@RiversideCHP

Adeline Keogh is our new Community Cohesion Worker.

The aim of her role is to make North Benwell and High Cross a cleaner, safer healthier and a friendlier place to live and work in.

These goals can only be achieved by working closely with local residents. By getting to know each other through fun activities and open and honest discussions, the project aims to build better understanding and trust between communities. By working with local people it is hoped that the confidence of the local community will be improved and the community alongside support from the council and other partner organisations can address the issues that impact their lives.

Through such an approach residents themselves can identify concerns and solutions to local problems, as they will know what will work better.'
