Diane Tait is our new community cohesion worker. The aim of her role is to make North Benwell and Highcross a safer, cleaner, healthier and friendlier place to live.

These goals can only be achieved by working closely with local residents. By promoting open, honest conversation and a better understanding of one another it is hoped that better relationships and friendships can be formed between neighbours. The project brings people together through events, fun activities and groups to improve the local area. People are encouraged to voice their concerns and work together to form solutions. There is a real emphasis on improving the local environment and making it a more enjoyable and safe place to live. The community cohesion worker will work closely with partner organisations and enable residents to access the services and support they offer.
